Chief Justice Resigns ABA

Association Board Says Termination Not Related to Dues

Chicago.—The board of governors of the American Bar association Friday night accepted the resignation of Chief Justice Earl Warren from the group. Warren, 67, the 14th chief justice of the United States, has been a member of the ABA for 28 years.

Ross L. Malone of Roswell, N. M., association president, said: "The resignation of Chief Justice Earl Warren as a member of the American Bar association was accepted today by the board of governors of the association. The termination of membership was in no way related to dues. The chief justice has assured me that he will cooperate with the association as he has done in the past."

Dues Reference—Malone did not elaborate on the statement. The reference to dues in the ABA statement apparently was in answer to earlier reports that the ABA had dropped Warren from its roster for non-payment of dues.

In Washington, an aide to Warren had no immediate comment from the chief justice on the group's action. Although Warren said he resigned from the bar group in 1957, an ABA spokesman said a letter of resignation was not received from the chief justice.

Dues Reference—Malone did not elaborate on the statement. The reference to dues in the ABA statement apparently was in answer to earlier reports that the ABA had dropped Warren from its roster for non-payment of dues.

Nelson Lends Support to Court Program

Calls Reorganization Proposal in State 'Must Legislation'

Milwaukee.—Gov. Gaylord Nelson has given his support to a bill that calls for reorganization of the Wisconsin court system.

The chief executive, in an address at a Wisconsin State Bar association meeting here Friday, said that the reorganization measure proposed by the judicial council is "must legislation."

He also voiced support for a bill proposed by Chief Justice John Martin that would give supreme court justices clerks to help speed up their work.

Two Trial Courts—The council reorganization bill provides for only two trial courts, circuit and county, with other courts becoming branches of it. The powers of justices of the peace also would be limited.

Atty. Gen. John Reynolds, speaking at the same meeting, said that a petition requesting the state bar to determine whether he is acting in accordance with its ethical code "is an effort to use the bar for ulterior purposes."

Regents Board—He referred to a petition filed with the board of governors of the bar by two Milwaukee attorneys. They asked the board to determine if it was ethical for Reynolds to refuse to represent the board of state college regents in further Supreme court proceedings on the ouster of Prof. George Ball from the Superior or college faculty. "In my judgment," Reynolds said, "this petition has resulted in unfavorable publicity for the Bar association."

Danish Diplomat Sentenced on Spying Charge

Copenhagen.—Former top Danish diplomat Einar Blechberg today was sentenced to eight years in prison for spying on behalf of Polish intelligence in the first major espionage trial in Denmark's history.

Blechberg, 63, admitted in court he had surrendered 11 documents from the files of the Danish embassy in Bonn, West Germany, to a German-speaking Polish agent he knew only as "Baumgarten." Danish security agents were sent to Bonn last May to question Blechberg, then No. 3 man in the Danish embassy there, after the embassy reported state papers were missing.

Following an investigation, Blechberg was arrested and brought back to Copenhagen.

Three Girls Handed Terms in Jail for School Bomb Threats

Fulton, N.Y.—Six-month jail sentences have been given three high school girls for telephoning a series of bomb threats to their school. A fourth girl was placed on probation for two years.

The calls resulted in evacuation of the school on five occasions. Judge Maurice B. Conley of Fulton county yesterday sentenced Gloria Jean Dickquist, 17, to jail. Rosamund and Karen Gardner, all 17, to jail.

Hey Kids! Meet the Mentor

Tomorrow's Teacher May be Slick Gadget With Built-in Patience

Los Angeles.—Hey, kids—meet your new teacher. She's streamlined and slick as a chrome-plated hotrod. She never scolds or tells you to wash your hands. She won't make you pay attention—she traps you into it. You can even punch her and she won't get sore. Your new schoolmarm, destined to pop into your schoolroom any year now, resembles nothing human—because she isn't.

She looks more like a pinball gadget with flashing lights and rows of buttons. Tomorrow's Teacher—Tomorrow's teacher, as constructed by Dr. Evan R. Keislar of University of California at Los Angeles, is an electronic viewbox with built-in patience. If you goof, she waits quietly until you correct yourself before going on with the rest of the lesson. Dr. Keislar, an educational psychologist, invented the teaching machine primarily to help teachers do a better job. But he admits, a little sadly, that it may be used to relieve the teacher shortage in some hard-pressed school districts.

Russia Rolls Out Red Carpet for Macmillan

Stanley Yankus, 40, and His family post a "for sale" sign on their Dowagiac, Mich., chicken farm. Yankus said today he'll move his wife and children to Australia in the wake of his failure to obtain relief from the U. S. wheat control program under which $4,300 in penalties have been levied against him for planting excess acreage to feed his chickens. From left to right are Russell, 13; Dennis, 11; his wife Mildred, behind Karen, 3, and Yankus.

Farmer Says He's Had Enough

'Wheat Rebel' to Leave U. S.

Dowagiac, Mich.—A "for sale" sign has gone up on the farm of wheat rebel Stanley Yankus. The poultry farmer who decided to give up farming a month ago yesterday to give up the United States.

Yankus, 39, one of Cass county's largest poultry farm operators, says he is "tired of beating my head against a stone wall" in a long fight against government wheat controls and is heading for Australia and a new start.

Fights Government—Since 1953, Yankus, married and the father of three children, has been fighting the government wheat acreage allotment program. He estimates he still owes about $2,600 in fines and penalties for growing more than the allotted wheat quota on his 100-acre farm near this southwestern Michigan community.

The government claimed about $1,700 of Yankus' bank account a year ago to settle part of the penalties. The farmer said he has asked the government to bill him as soon as possible for the rest.

"I'm infuriated by these actions and I'm going to leave the country because of them," Yankus said as he set the "for sale" sign in his front yard. Yankus has contended that wheat grown on his farm was used feeding his poultry, not commercially. He sold about 53,000 dozen eggs a year.

Leave Country—Yankus said he had been accepted by the Australian government as an immigrant and will leave the U. S. with his family as soon as his farm is sold and the rest of his fines are paid from the proceeds.

Yankus said he decided to move to Australia because of his youngsters. "All I foresee here are more and more restrictions and no opportunities for my boys," he said. "They tell me they encourage expansion and initiative in Australia."

Catcalls Greet Gov. Rockefeller

New York.—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller was greeted by a mixture of catcalls, boos, applause and cheers last night as he delivered a brief address before some 5,000 visitors to the New York coliseum.

Rockefeller welcomed the throng to the national outdoor exposition. The booning and catcalls apparently stemmed from Rockefeller's call for more state income taxes, preference jobs to relatives and retention annually when the house of representatives re-evaluates its office payroll.

Asked later about the unfavorable aspect of the 2-minute demonstration, Rockefeller replied: "I think this is perfectly natural."

Government Jobs for Kin Gains Spotlight

At Least Six of 82 New House Members Have Their Wives on Federal Payroll

Washington.—As it does almost every year, nepotism today attracted a spotlight on Capitol Hill.

The ancient political practice of giving government jobs to relatives received attention annually when the house of representatives re-evaluates its office payroll. This year's records show that at least six of the 82 new house members have their wives on the payroll. The wives' salaries range from $4,047 to $13,344 a year. In addition, Rep. Steven V. Carter (D-Iowa), a freshman congressman, hired his 19-year-old son, a freshman college student, as an $11,000-a-year assistant. Nepotism total may be even larger. Observers usually try to spot the practice by comparing last names on the office payroll with the last name of the congressman. But some wives use their maiden names; some daughters use their married names.

And the senate refuses to open its payroll records to public scrutiny. Any nepotism there usually is a secret. "We have always been a team," Rep. Leonard G. Wolf (D-Iowa) said, explaining why his wife Marilyn, is on the payroll for $10,379 a month.

Working Wives—The five other new congressmen with wives on the payroll were Rep. Robert W. Levering (D-Ohio), wife Edleen, $12,527 a year; Rep. Denver D. Hargis (D-Kan.), wife Charles, $8,192; Rep. Ralph Rivers (D-Alaska), wife Martha, $4,800; Rep. Ransall S. Harmon (D-Ind.), wife Mary, $4,424; Rep. William H. Meyer (D-Vt.), wife Bertha, $4,047.

Khrushchev Meets British Leader; Voices Hope for Useful Exchange of Views

Moscow.—British Prime Minister Macmillan flew into Moscow today with a smile, a gentle dig at his host and a fur hat that wowed the Russians.

Premier Khrushchev welcomed him to the Soviet Union with a speech full of friendly sentiment and expressing hope for "a useful exchange of views."

Macmillan and his foreign ministers, Selwyn Lloyd, got a red carpet reception upon their arrival for talks they hope will ease world tensions.

Better Understanding—"I do not come to negotiate on particular subjects," Macmillan said. "I do hope, however, that in our talks together we shall at least reach a better understanding of our points of view."

"Perhaps in this way our visit may help to alleviate some of the cares that at present bring anxiety to the world."

He recalled that his previous visit to Russia was 30 years ago as an ordinary tourist.

"I think," he added, "that I will see as many changes in the Soviet Union as there have been in England since the picture painted by Dickens."

This was a slyly inserted reference to the wide sale in the Soviet Union of novels by Charles Dickens which criticized social conditions in England in the last century. It was Macmillan's way of pointing out no Russian should think Dickens' stories reflect present day English life.

Greets Spectators—At one point in his airport reception Macmillan walked over to Soviet spectators standing silently in a roped-off enclosure, and greeted them. They burst into applause.

Off came Macmillan's light gray fur hat in response. The crowd loved the hat. Applause turned into laughter. Macmillan grinned with pleasure and put his hat back on.

Khrushchev arrived at the airport at 2:50 p.m. (Moscow time)—just eight minutes before Macmillan's Comet 4-jet plane touched down two minutes ahead of schedule.

The Soviet premier gave Macmillan a cordial greeting in an impressive setting. A honor color guard of officers—their swords shimmering in the sun light—stood smartly at attention and a military band blared the Soviet and British anthems.

Khrushchev walked with Macmillan in reviewing the guard. A troop of Soviet soldiers dressed in warm greatcoats, grey hats and carrying rifles paraded shouting "rah, rah" in a greeting to the visitors. From the moment he left

File Million Dollar Suit on Behalf of Young Crash Survivor

Chicago.—Agents for an 8-year-old orphan, one of eight survivors of the Feb. 4 American airlines plane crash in New York City, have filed a million dollar law suit against the airline.

A circuit court suit was filed yesterday in behalf of Robert Sullivan, who survived the East river crash which killed his parents and two young sisters. Altogether, 65 persons were killed when the plane plunged into the river as it approached LaGuardia field. The suit asks $500,000 for the death of each parent, Joseph and Lorraine Sullivan of West Hempstead, Long Island. Their daughters, Joan, 5, and Patricia, 12, also were killed.

Dulles Treated Second Time

Secretary Undergoes Another Round in X-Ray Chambers

Washington.—Secretary of State Dulles goes back today to the concrete and lead X-ray chamber in Walter Reed hospital for his second massive radiation treatment for cancer.

It soon will be a familiar journey. Present plans call for treatments every day, except Sunday, under the hospital's million volt X-ray machine for possibly three or four weeks. At the end of that period doctors may be able to say whether Dulles can return to his state department desk.

Dulles, who will be 72 next Wednesday, apparently held up well after Friday's first treatment for abdominal cancer.

"Treatment was well tolerated," said a medical bulletin issued by Lincoln White, state department press officer.

This meant, White said, that Dulles was not sickened as is the case with some people who undergo heavy X-ray treatments.

Castro, Cabinet Move to Halt Cuban Land Rush

Havana.—Premier Fidel Castro and his cabinet acted today to prevent peasants from jumping the gun and starting a premature land rush in the program of agrarian reform.

The government said it will distribute land to peasants in a legal, orderly manner. It decreed that peasants who try to occupy the land before it is distributed will lose their rights under the program.

There have been many cases reported of peasants occupying tracts illegally since the program was announced. Most of the land to be distributed is idle. Much of it was held by big landholders who acquired possession simply by the process of occupation.

Apartment Home

Holy Name Sisters Move From Convent

Kimberly — Family moving problems are sometimes confusing but everything went smoothly in the process of moving 12 nuns from the convent at Holy Name school to an apartment house Friday afternoon.

The Dominican sisters took up residence in a double apartment building at 413 Railroad street where they will be for about the next year.

Start April 1
Holy Name parish, where the sisters teach in the grade school, plans to build a new modern convent. The present convent will be moved from the site and construction work Timmers, John Van Zeeland, Kenneth Van Zeeland, Joseph Whittmann, Jr., Thomas Ka-Weeks, Raymond Van Koch, Anthony Possler, Francis Weeks, Raymond Van Zeeland, Gerald Ederer, Ralph Coenen, Mark Niesen, Gerald Nyles, Donald Swetz and Cletus Helf.

Nicolet PTA Plans Public Card Party

Kaukauna — The Nicolet Parent-Teacher association will hold a public card party at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the school with prizes awarded in various games.

The event was originally scheduled Feb. 3 but was postponed by the heavy snow storm. School children have been selling tickets for the last few weeks. A social hour will be held and lunch served after the card session.

Children at the school were happy about the occasion as it gave them a holiday from classes.

Living in the apartment building will not be as convenient as the convent was for the sisters. The convent was close to the other parish buildings and afforded opportunities for extra time spent in school and church.

Have Own Car
Arrangements to get the nuns to and from school and church are being made by the parish. The sisters do have their own car and this will solve part of the problem. Volunteers have already turned in their names to act as drivers. Parish priests are working out a schedule with the volunteers where they will transport a group of the sisters to school on different weeks.

Plans for the new convent are still in the hands of the

Parting Advice of a Patriot

The most often quoted part of George Washington's Farewell Address has been the warning to his countrymen to beware of foreign entanglements. Whether this program since should have been scuttled probably will be argued for all time. But the background of Washington's realization that the infant United States had no business getting involved with other countries is interesting.

During the Revolutionary war, France finally had agreed to come to the aid of the colonies but an alliance was the price of the military supplies, fleet and commercial agreement. After the French monarchy fell, the alliance became an increasing source of embarrassment to the now free United States. Citizen Genet, the first minister from the new French Republic, used his office in an effort to get aid for his country against England in flagrant affronts to the United States government and almost incitements to revolt against President Washington. Our needed trade with England was hampered because of the continuing war or threat of war between England and France. Both countries threw up restrictions which most definitely denied freedom of the seas and our efforts at neutrality. The Jay Treaty, negotiated with England with commercial advantages to the United States, probably was the most unpopular in our history due to the general feeling in this country that the French Revolutionists were blood brothers of the American Revolutionists.

But by the time President Washington had decided against running for a third term, he was thoroughly convinced that our ties with France were a serious mistake. Alexander Hamilton helped him compose the Farewell Address but an occurrence shortly before he had it published certainly influenced part of it.

Our minister to France, James Monroe, wrote the president that a letter from Washington to Gouverneur Morris had been intercepted by the French Directorate, although it was a private letter addressed to a friend and sent on an American ship. The French government was displeased because Washington had expressed "an ardent wish that the United States might remain at peace with all the world, taking no disputes in any part of it." The French most definitely felt that the alliance bound us to some degree of warfare at least.

Writing back to Monroe, Washington expressed surprise that the French should be annoyed:

My conduct in public and private life, as it relates to the important struggle in which the French nation is engaged, has been uniform from the commencement of it, and may be summed up in a few words: that I have always given it as my decided opinion that no nation had a right to intermeddle in the internal concerns of another; that everyone had a right to form and adopt whatever government they liked best to live under themselves. And that if this country could, consistently with its engagements, maintain a strict neutrality, and thereby preserve peace, it was bound to do so by motives of policy, interest, and every other consideration that ought to actuate a people situated and circumstanced as we are . . .

It was a small step then to the words of the Farewell Address, first published in the American Daily Advertiser, a Philadelphia newspaper, on Sept. 19, 1796, as . . .

the disinterested warnings of a parting friend . . . Observe good faith and justice towards all nations. Cultivate peace and harmony with all . . . but against the insidious wiles of foreign influence . . . the jealousy of a free people ought to be constantly awake . . . Excessive partiality for one foreign nation and excessive dislike of another cause those whom they actuate to see danger only on one side, and serve to veil and even second the arts of influence on the other . . . Tis our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world . . . Tis folly in one nation to look for disinterested favors from another . . . There can be no greater error than to expect or calculate upon real favors from nation to nation . . .

Neither the French nor the English were happy about the Farewell Address. The Republicans, political opponents of Washington, lambasted it as an insult to France. But its ideas were followed for a century of American history in which time we grew to be probably the strongest nation in the world. Whether it was that new situation, a change in the speed of travel or an abandonment of Washington's precepts which drew us into such complete involvement in foreign affairs as today can never be accurately decided. But it is obvious that Washington's ideas of neutrality, upheld for several generations, kept us free to expand and progress.

Nominating Petitions

When former Atty. Gen. Stewart G. Honeck filed his nomination papers last fall he complained about the state requirement of securing signers and suggested that it should be replaced with a filing fee.

Although Honeck, a Republican, was defeated in the election. Assemblyman Ward, a Democrat from Richland Center, has taken the Honeck suggestion. He now is offering a bill in the legislature to set up a schedule of filing fees which candidates might pay in lieu of nomination papers. Those not wishing to pay the fees could still get on the ticket with the number of signatures now required.

Of course the nomination papers are not true petitions in any sense of the word. They often are signed by all comers in cigar stores or in bars. Many of the signers are people who will "sign anything" and often enough they will sign papers for more than one candidate for the same office. It is no test of eligibility.

On the other hand, anyone likely to run for office also could pay the small fee suggested. The fee for statewide offices and those of United States senator and representative is put at $50; state senate and assembly offices, $25; offices in one county, $10; Milwaukee offices, $50; offices in other cities, $10; town, village or precinct offices, $2.

To offer two methods of getting on the ballot robs the fee idea of any virtue it might have had standing alone. The real purpose of imposing a fee is that it might help to keep out nuisance candidates. There always are those who will run with little or no hope of being elected merely because they can get on the ballot without much expense. Such candidates have been known to thwart the will of the people by confusing the voters and thus dividing the support of more worthy candidates.

We have a notion that if the bill is passed the really skillful politicians will continue to circulate nomination papers. Good politicians use nomination papers as a means of campaigning. First, they arrange to have them circulated by friends who are thus alerted to the candidate's needs, and later the candidate may acknowledge each signature with a note of appreciation. The successful politician never finds any contact with the people "time consuming or costly." He always makes it appear to be a pleasure for him to act in any public manner and this business of circulating nomination papers is performed with zest for that makes for votes.

County Consolidation Discussed for Iowa

From The Dubuque (Iowa) Telegraph-Record
Striking of county consolidation, Iowa has 90 counties and could get along with 30. The legislative research bureau says that the legislature has authority to combine counties. The proposal was made by the governor's reorganization commission. Whether such a combination would be an advantage, the bureau adds, would not be known until consolidation is tried. An actual consolidation would be the final test, to be sure, but we can guess at a few advantages prior to such a test. It seems quite reasonable to assume that far-reaching advantages could be derived from combinations that would reduce the number from 99 to 30, for example.

What obviously is needed is a serious study of these advantages. Many states of greater population have fewer counties than Iowa, and many other comparable situations could be examined.

istration that the research for this study would have been more complete if on-the-spot observations could be made.

The bureau points to the consolidation to a vote of the people when voters can be so poorly informed about it. The bureau also advises against leaving consolidation to supervisors, because they would have a "natural reluctance to wipe out some fellow employee's job."

Medical Profile of George Washington Says:

'Not Recommended for Active Duty'

BY RUDOLPH MARX, M. D.

If one looks closely at Gilbert Stuart's well-known portrait of George Washington, one observes an artificial bulging of the cheeks, as if they had been stuffed with cotton.

It has been reported that Stuart actually did use cotton to fill out the sunken cheeks of the illustrious sitter of this portrait, who at the time was wearing a set of ill-fitting dentures. In 1796, when the picture was painted, Washington was the proud possessor of two sets of these awkward and noisy contraptions, made of ivory. The face of the president is covered with a rosy glaze in the picture. His real complexion was described by his contemporaries as sallow, a color that was even visible through the tan which the sun and wind had burned on his face.

The painter also carefully retouched the pockmarks that deeply pitted Washington's features. These blemishes Washington had acquired at the age of 19 during an ill-fated journey to Barbados with his brother Lawrence.

Tall and Lean

In most portraits, the father of his country is shown as having a chest bulging with well deserved pride. The chest must have been tailor-made. Under the well-padded coat, Washington's chest was flat and somewhat hollow in the center, probably from rickets.

Col. Tobias Lear, his devoted secretary and faithful friend, immediately after the death of the general, took his bodily measurements for posterity. He recorded Washington's shoulders, as one foot, nine inches across, which is average for a man of the unusual height of Washington. He measured six feet, three and one-half inches tall. If Washington was that tall at the age of 67, he must have been at least one inch taller at the prime of life.

Like Lincoln, with whom he had many physical characteristics in common, Washington was in his youth a champion wrestler and rail-splitter. It is a curious phenomenon that the two greatest presidents of the United States were also physical giants.

Many Diseases

In spite of great physical strength and endurance, Washington was subjected to a host of diseases in his lifetime. He suffered from at least ten attacks of serious illness which on several occasions brought him to the brink of death. The question is whether Washington had more than his share of sickness in a period of history when a number of diseases were taken for granted, diseases which modern science has virtually conquered and which we have almost forgotten.

In Washington's world a great percentage of babies died from nutritional deficiencies and diarrhea. If they survived they were exposed to the prevalent epidemics. Among them were measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough and diphtheria.

If a person in the eighteenth century survived the trial period of infancy and childhood, he had to run the gauntlet of a legion of other diseases. He was forever threatened by the white plague, tuberculosis, which was the number one killer of the time. Then there was always malaria lurking in the swamps, various strains of dysentery easily transmitted by uncooked food and drink, and the enteric fevers—typhoid and paratyphoid, harbored in human carriers and transmitted by food, drinking water and the ubiquitous flies. Ever threatening was pneumonia.

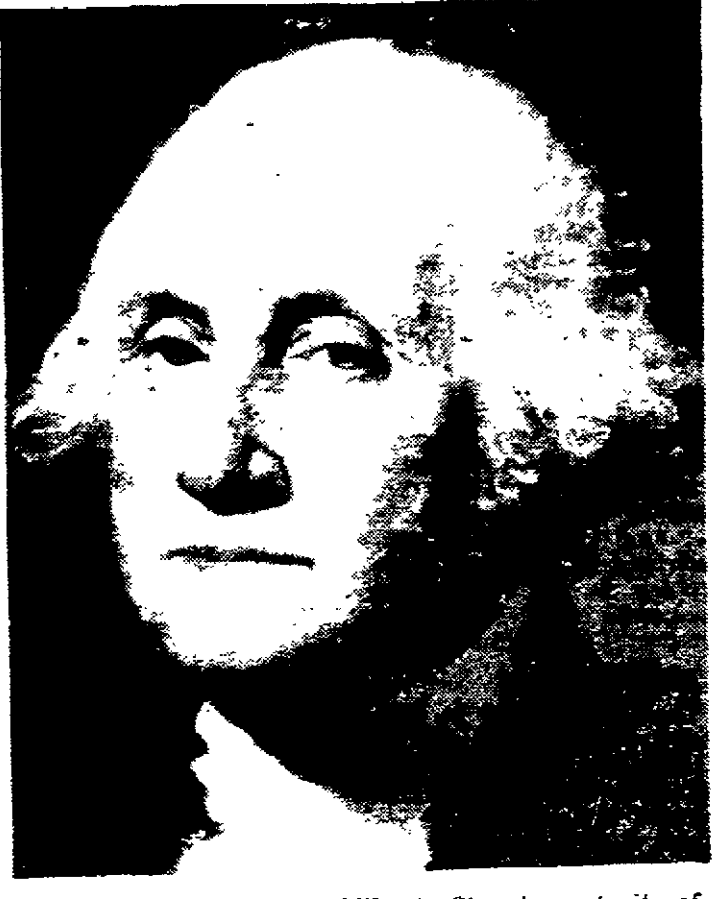

Early Illness

In his 17th year Washington was licensed by the William and Mary college in Virginia as a public surveyor, a profession which he practiced for several years in Fairfax county. Camping outdoors as a surveyor, was promptly bitten by malaria-carrying mosquitoes and suffered his first attack of malaria, called ague. During his later life Washington had repeated bouts of this fever.

We have already mentioned the severe case of smallpox which he contracted at Barbados. This calamitous trip not only failed to achieve its central purpose—curbing the consumption of his brother, who died a few months later, but it brought George into close contact with the virulent tuberculosis bacilli as he nursed Lawrence.

Washington had barely returned to Mount Vernon, still weak from the smallpox, when the tubercular infection broke through and manifested itself in the form of acute pleurisy. He recovered slowly and was in poor health many long months.

After two years the process must have been arrested,

In the Well-Known Gilbert Stuart portrait of George Washington, many of the traces of age and illness have been carefully concealed by the painter's art.

with a severe attack of malaria.

In 1755 the English general, Edward Braddock, asked Washington to join his expedition against the French and Indians. The campaign had not progressed far when Washington fell ill with a febrile disease, apparently of the influenza type.

On the day before the battle of Monongahela, Washington rose from his sickbed, still weak and barely able to sit on his horse. The battle itself, as every schoolboy knows, was a complete disaster. Braddock was killed, his troops were routed, and Washington managed to extricate the remainder of the detachment after two horses had been killed under him and his uniform pierced by four balls. Two years later Washington contracted a severe type of dysentery accompanied with high fever and deep prostration which lasted for several months.

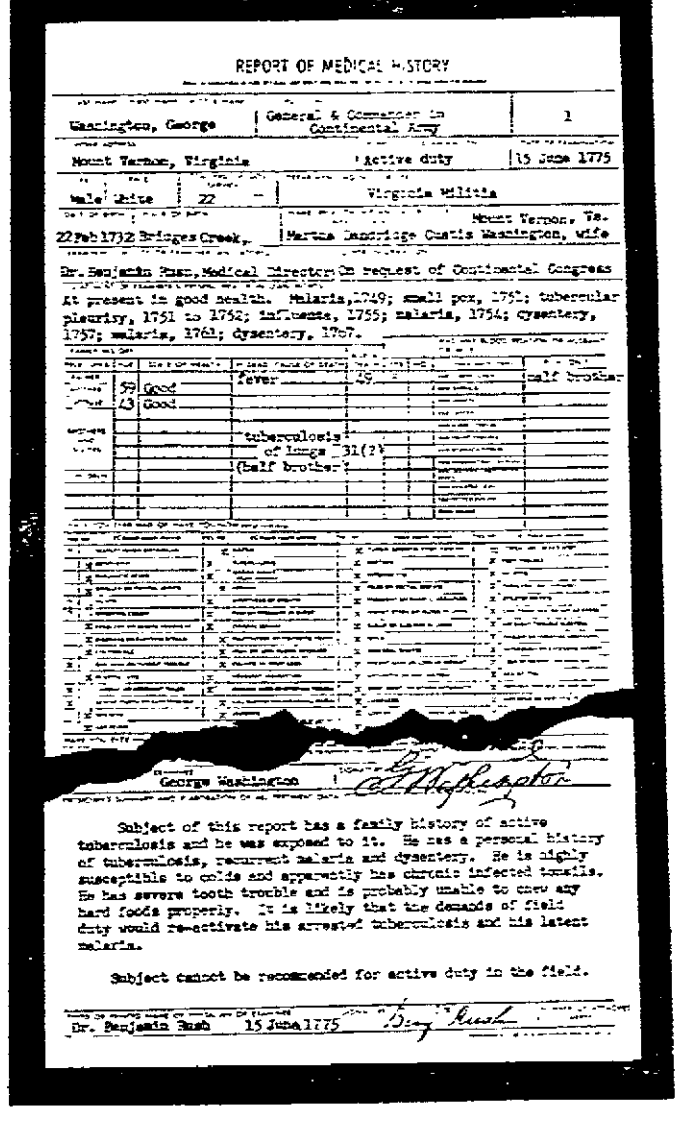

In January, 1759, Washington married the widow, Martha Custis. Apparently marriage had a beneficial influence on Washington's health. No sickness is reported in his diaries until 1761 when he had another attack which he believed to be malaria, though it may have been typhoid fever.

Health Is Better

There is no mention of any disabling sickness for the next six years, then he suffered another attack of dysentery. This was followed by the longest period of freedom from illness that Washington ever enjoyed. It included the long years of the Revolutionary war. Except for one brief illness, probably a bad cold, destiny kept alive and well the only man of his time who could lead the American Revolution to victory.

Following the conclusion of the war and his election to the presidency, came a letdown and he fell ill once

Nowadays, when anyone mentions "The Belgian" in northeastern Wisconsin he's talking about Curley Lambeau, one-time Packer football coach and player. Eighty years ago it meant Xavier Martin.

The century-long history of the region's Belgian community is laced with individual success stories. Xavier Martin's is one, but there's a subtle difference. The others were all products of that community, whereas in his case it was the other way around.

In many ways the prosperous development of the northeastern Wisconsin Belgians was the work of Martin. No individual among them did more for his countrymen than this assertive, colorful offspring of one of their original pioneers.

Came on a Visit

Xavier Joseph Martin was the son of Jean Baptiste Martin, one of the intrepid 10 who abandoned their small holdings in the Province of Brabant to blaze a trail to Wisconsin in 1853. Xavier was born in the farm village of Grez-Doiceau, Jan. 10, 1832. He was 21 when he came to America with his family.

He did not, however, come directly west. The family stopped over in Philadelphia for several months and when it rejoined the pioneer group in 1854 young Martin remained behind to go to school and learn English.

When he finally reached Wisconsin in 1857 it was apparently only to visit his folks. He was a school teacher back east, had married in Philadelphia and intended to settle down there.

However, the primitive conditions under which his friends existed and the way they were being pushed around annoyed him. When they asked him to stay and help them he agreed.

It wasn't that the Belgians were being exploited so much as that they were ignored. Although they lived in an organized township and constituted almost the entire population, they had nothing to say in its management. A dominant handful of older settlers ran things to suit themselves and made no effort to provide schools, roads or other services badly needed. The Belgians, unable to understand English, didn't have any idea of what was going on beyond a vague suspicion they were missing

Martin's first move was to get control of the town government. He began by explaining to the settlers the American system and their rights under it, then talked them into united action.

Belgians Take Over

At the election of 1858 a solid column of 230 Belgians descended on the polls near Ray Settlement. They had a complete list of candidates drawn up by Martin, and even ballots printed in Belgian. Their slate swept into office on a landslide.

Young Martin did all right for himself in the process. He came out with the posts of town clerk, school superintendent and justice of the peace.

He had good reasons for picking those offices. He was the only logical candidate for clerk, being the only one who could speak and write English; and as a teacher he was naturally interested in the superintendency. The J. P. job carried prestige and an income through fees.

He held all three for five years, eventually adding the postmastership when a post office was established at Robinsonville. Thanks to his energy and influence a road system was laid out, school districts were organized, schools built and a teaching staff assembled. In those five years the settlement made greater advances than in any other comparable period in its history.

Register of Deeds

In 1862 Martin ran for register of deeds of Brown County. Elected, he had to give up his town offices and move to Green Bay, where he lived the rest of his life. Despite being an active Republican in a predominantly Democratic county he was reelected for seven terms and then went into city politics.

An impetuous and often headstrong leader, Martin was also stubborn where his convictions were concerned, so much so that he frequently plunged into embarrassing situations. One of those convictions was his strong dislike for cruelty to animals, a rare trait in the 19th century.

Founder of S.P.C.A.

On one occasion he publicly threatened to horsewhip a driver with his own whip if he continued to beat his team. Another time he announced his intention, as a member of the city council, to arrest anyone taking part in a live pigeon shoot, a threat that stopped the whole affair.

Martin was often ridiculed for such things but it didn't bother him. He was one of the founders of the state chapter of the S. P. C. A., its first president and served until his death.

All his life Martin remained a zealous watchdog of the interests of the Belgian community. This country men trusted him implicitly and came to him for all kinds of advice, which he gave freely. Business associates used to say he could have made a fortune as a lawyer just out of the legal problems the Belgians brought to him.

Father and Son Sarnoff Crystal-Gaze About TV

McBride Book Shows 30-Year Ago
Prophecy of Elder Man Came True

BY CHARLES MERCER

New York—In her forthcoming book, "A Long Way From Missouri," Margaret McBride remarks on the prophetic powers of David Sarnoff, now board chairman of RCA, who 30 years ago was forecasting television much as we have it today.

Last week his son, NBC Board Chairman Robert W. Sarnoff, cast a prophetic look 10 years ahead to see what television will be like in 1959. He told the Los Angeles Junior Chamber of Commerce he foresaw:

The possibility of receiving most of a basic college education through accredited TV courses. If he reads Miss McBride's book, he'll observe that his father forecast the same thing in 1929.

People will be able to carry pocket-size transistor TV sets everywhere with them. There will be live international telecasts every day. Sets will have big flat wall screens mural size operated at chairside. Etcetera.

As an old crystal ball gazer myself I adore prophecy, and am inclined to believe every word of it. Consulting my personal crystal after Sarnoff's shaken his, I was somewhat shocked to find his prophecy true. But mine was clouded by one Pete Ibbertson, successful businessman, commuter, devoted husband and parent.

Life in 1959

There, in 1959, Pete was flying home from the office on the 5-48 helicopter. Nobody on his helio was reading those old-fashioned newspapers. Everyone had his own pocket transistor TV set. Many were watching the early evening news report though a few tired businessmen were turned to the 9th rerun of "I Love Lucy."

After landing at his local heliport Pete returned to a home quite different from that he had visualized for his wife, Grace, and himself away back in 1959.

"Grace" he used to say in 1959, "I love the kids but sometimes I look forward to a day when they're in college and we're by ourselves. Then I'll have time to read some of the books I wanted to. I'll have time to."

Greeted by Noise

When he entered his house, Pete was greeted by a cacophony of sounds. Grace was staring at the 18-foot wall mural screen where NBC was presenting live from Central Africa the coronation of King Zuzuru - Burumu of Uranda-Urundi. In the den Pete Jr. was tuned to his psychology TV college course. In the dining room Sue was cutting the class and had her transistor set turned very loud to a popular singer.

He took his scientifically nutritious pills from the oven and sat down at the kitchen table. It occurred to him to read a book while he ate dinner. But then he remembered that they'd given away the books to make room for the mural TV screen.

There was nothing to do but turn on his transistor set. For a while, as he chewed his pills, he watched the CBS coverage of the Tibetan lama ceremony. Then he began switching from channel to channel looking for an old western.

Clamor for Program
Patterned on Old
Damosch Shows

New York—The success of Leonard Bernstein's monthly television concerts with the New York Philharmonic has prompted many viewers to suggest that he present a weekly TV series such as Walter Damosch's many offered

The problems involved are insurmountable, Bernstein said the other day in his Carnegie hall dressing room.

In addition to his regular concert schedule and his monthly Saturday series for children over CBS-TV, he is composing several musical works, and has many other commitments.

The function of the New York Philharmonic must be different from that of orchestras in other American cities. New York offers so much in music the arts and entertainment that its Philharmonic can easily be sublimated unless it has a national—even an international—character.

"One way to accomplish this is by concert tours. Even more helpful is television."

Both public and critics have received the Philharmonic's Sunday TV program enthusiastically.

It takes a full month to prepare for a one-hour TV program," he said. "I've often heard that we should do a weekly TV series, like Walter Damosch used to do on radio."

Another Family Moving to California has entrusted the sale of their home to Engel Realtors. This home is located in the first ward of Neenah. It was planned and built four years ago to the owner's specifications. To see this home, or for further information, you may call Engel Realtors, RE 3-4487. 2 French Actors in Humorous Situation Philadelphia—French movie actors Louis Jourdan and Jean Pierre Aumont came down from New York the other night to see a new play, soon to be on Broadway.

After theater they went to a supper club for dinner, and were standing at the bar, waiting to be seated when Arnold Zaslav, a businessman, came up.

"I couldn't help telling you," he said addressing Aumont, "that you bear a remarkable resemblance to Jean Pierre Aumont."

Aumont smiled and replied, "Perhaps you would like to meet my friend. He bears a remarkable resemblance to Louis Jourdan."

TV, Its Advertisers Must Clean House, Warns GOP Senator Washington—Sen. John Marshall Butler (R Md) says television and TV advertisers must, in his words, clean house or face the possibility of congress doing it for them.

The networks Butler said are digging their own graves by offering programs which he contended are devoted to wholesale murder and commercials "geared to know-nothings."

Butler added that commercial TV and TV advertisers appear to have adopted an attitude of the "public be damned."

From Bach To Bop And Back To Bach is the record slogan at Heid's Music Co. store at 308 E. College avenue where literally thousands and thousands of records are on hand to suit the musical fancy of every music-lover in town. Heid's has the largest selection of records in Wisconsin outside of Milwaukee and what they don't have, they will order. Heid's invite you to come in and browse around in their record department at 308 E. College avenue.

With many thousands of records from which to choose any Fox Cities music-lover can find the record of his choice at Heid Music Co.

The store carries a large selection of popular, classic, semi-classic, jazz and children's records. Many discs now come in stereophonic reproduction and are available at Heid's in all four speeds: 33, 45, 78, and 16.

New on the Heid shelves are the sound track from "Auntie Mame" and other musical comedies. They have Maynard Ferguson, Dave Brubeck, Stan Kenton and J. Johnson. New also is Nat King Cole's album "Welcome to the Club" and Frank Sinatra's "Come Dance With Me."

They have recently increased their classic field and will order any record that they do not have in stock. Most classical records are now being rerecorded in stereo for play on the new machines.

Popular among the jazz enthusiasts are Shelly Manne, at 308 E. College avenue.

Special at Jerry's Shoe Service is being offered this week when they slashed $2.00 off the price of every pair of insulated footwear in the shop, including Fin 'N Feather Boots by Chippewa, hand-made Hunki-Dori work shoes and oxfords, all of which are regularly priced from $6.50 and up per pair. The partners in the firm are Jerry and Bill Lyman, shown above at the counter of their new location 123 N. Appleton street. The price shows the enlarged new shoe department in the foreground and the repair shop at the rear.

Stock at the new location (Jerry's Shoe Service was moved from quarters in the John Balliet Hotel over the Thanksgiving weekend to its present location at 123 N. Appleton street) includes a newly enlarged line of men's and boys' shoes, oxfords and loafers, as well as women's and of shoe strings and shoe care children's tennis shoes, saddle items: polishes, brushes and shoe cremes.

Other work shoes stocked at Jerry's are by Winnebago, Tru-Fit and Thorogood. Jerry's also has a complete line, done while you wait.

"Many people can't get used to doing nothing with their left foot while driving," Cloud 64 inches, with the right end said, "even though in the only 2 1/2 inches from the manual transmission days a celerator pedal, an arrangement they used their right foot for ment that makes it easy for both accelerating and braking—either the left or right foot ing."

Cloud Buick Co., 210 N. Morrison street, pointed out today that most people driving cars with automatic transmissions operate both the accelerator and brake pedals with their right foot only, pivoting on the heel. That's the way recommended by national safety officials.

Some folks, though, use both feet, the left for the brake and the right for the accelerator. Authorities attribute this to two things—natural left-handedness or a carry-over from the days when it was necessary to depress the clutch pedal with the left foot to shift gears.

Every Prescription Is An Important part of their business, according to Martin M. Unmuth of Unmuth Drugs, 208 E. Wisconsin avenue. Every man behind a prescription counter these days must work hard to keep abreast of fast-moving developments in their field. Working in the large, modern drug store, shown above, besides Marty, are Carl A. Versteegen and Adrian F. Unmuth.

Professional duties of the pharmacist are becoming increasingly complex. Unmuth said. Twenty years ago he was concerned primarily with mixing powders, liquids and ointments or rolling his own pills but today he is more of a consultant and educator than compounder. The pharmacist must be familiar with about 40,000 drug and related products. About 400 new prescription drug preparations are introduced to the market annually.

Never before in history have Americans been so aware of pharmaceuticals because of many magazine and newspaper articles on them did not exist then or had new drugs and dramatic not yet been discovered.

cures. Today's public is far better informed and many times more curious. Unmuth said.

The sharply increasing complexity of retail pharmacy is also reflected, Unmuth explained, by the fact that there are more than 20 times as many prescription drugs available today as there were prior to World War II.

It is estimated that about 90 per cent of more than one million prescriptions filled each day in the nation's 53,000 drug stores could not have been dispensed 20 years ago because of many magazine and newspaper articles on them did not exist then or had new drugs and dramatic not yet been discovered.

Do You Want To "Rob A Safe?" Do you have itchy fingers at the thought of twirling knobs in just the right sequence? Honestly, wouldn't you like to get your hands on $500, honestly? It is all a gag at Valley Fair Shopping Center, but some lucky shopper will make the right guesses and open the safe with guaranteed total contents of at least $500 worth of valuable certificates of denominations of not less than $20.00 each, good for the purchase of merchandise at the Valley Fair Shopping Center Association member stores. Shown above is the "rob the safe" activity in action with hopeful winners giving the combination a try. Timing the contestant is Bob Bondy, disc jockey at WAPL.

Enjoying A Cup Of Coffee at the new automatic vending machine recently installed in the mechanical department of the Post-Crescent are Jean Lockschmidt and Joyce Schulze, employees in the bookkeeping department of the firm. Similar automatic vending machines are on location in business and industrial firms all over the Fox river valley under the auspices of Zaug Vending Service of New London. The firm has over 1,000 machines on location.

Here is your chance to "rob a safe". Everyone is eligible to win. There is nothing to buy, no obligation and the event is on right now for a 30-day period until some lucky Valley Fair visitor opens the safe and receives the entire contents—guaranteed total of at least $500 worth of valuable certificates good for the purchase of merchandise at the Valley Fair Shopping Center Association member stores.

All that is necessary to take opening hours at Valley Fair a try at opening the safe for 30 to make possible your 30-second is a free ticket from one—try to open it.

"Complete plant feeding service" is a feature of the firm's program, and the machines are placed in most of the Fox Cities' largest industries.

New Patterns of Spring Carpeting have arrived at the Carpet Shop, 506 W. College avenue. Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Kisslinger, owners and managers, are on hand to help and assist you in selecting just the right carpeting for your needs. Color is a personal decision and the Kisslingers advise you to have some idea of what color you will want, then come to the Carpet Shop to find it.

When you're picking your color, keep in mind that your carpet will be the largest single area of color in your home. Then decide whether you want the carpet to dictate the color scheme. Handsome colors are available in each and every fiber, but if the color of your dreams can't be found, inquire about carpets that can be dyed to match almost anything. This custom-dye feature is also something to keep in mind if you take your color scheme from a fabric, a picture or even a vase. There's a possibility that you'll decide to favor a neutral that will be "right" regardless of your decor, permitting you to go to a wild with color periodically in other items, such as fabrics and wallpaper. If so, you may well pick a neutral color belonging to the beige family. And, certainly, whether or not you wish to admit it, you'll realize that cleaning may be a problem. In this instance, consider fibers whose assets include soil resistance, spot resistance and cleanability. Incidentally, spot resistance and color permanence go the senior physicians continued to apply blisters and cataplasms of wheat bran to the legs and feet. The process of gradual suffocation progressed inexorably until about 10 minutes before the general expired, when breathing became easier. The exhausted heart stopped beating between 10 and 11 o'clock on the evening of Dec. 14, 1799.

From the first, Washington as usual had been exceedingly pessimistic about his illness.

"I find I am going," he whispered to Col. Lear. "I believed from the first that the disorder would prove fatal. And a little later he repeated the same conviction to Dr. Craik. 'Doctor, I die hard, but I am not afraid to go.'"

The exact diagnosis of George Washington's last sickness is still a matter of dispute among medical historians. The most convincing study was made by Dr. W.

A Wells of Washington D. C. in 1927. Dr. Wells concluded from all the known data that Washington died from a streptococcal laryngitis, an inflammatory swelling of the larynx and the vocal chords caused by a strain of virulent streptococci. We are unable to estimate how much the treatment contributed to the fatal outcome.

more with "ague and fever." He was treated by Dr. James Craik, who had been his physician for the preceding 32 years and had become his close personal friend.

In 1786 Dr. C. Craik for the first time employed "the bark" on Washington for malaria with excellent results. "The bark" meant the bark of the Chinchona tree which had been used for 140 years.

As the result of colds and the large doses of quinine taken for his malaria, Washington's hearing noticeably deteriorated during the last decade of his life. The deafness made it difficult for him to carry on conversations at public affairs and increased his native diffidence. Therefore he acquired a reputation of being cold and aloof in society.

Wears Glasses

After reaching middle age Washington had to wear glasses for reading. In those days people were ashamed to wear glasses, considering them a humiliating disfigurement. Washington used his reading glasses only in the privacy of his family and among intimate friends.

In 1790 the federal government was removed from New York to Philadelphia. In the spring of the same year Washington was taken with an attack of pneumonia followed by a relapse which almost proved fatal. He wrote: "I have already with less than a year had two severe attacks, the last worse than the first. A third probably will put me to sleep with my fathers."

There is no doubt that the respiratory and the nervous strain connected with the presidency were a great drain on the physical strength and stamina of Washington as on all other presidents since. Sixty-five years old, sick, and tired of public service, he declined to be nominated for a third term and retired to the privacy of Mount Vernon in the spring of 1797.

On the day of Dec. 12, 1799, as was his custom, Washington was riding about his farm from 10 a. m. until 3 p. m. The weather on this day was not rain, hail and snow, but a tempest, driven by an easterly wind. Washington was a stickler for punctuality in all his activities, including his meal hours. On this December day in 1799, Washington was late for dinner. Seated promptly at 3 o'clock, the meal was on the table when he entered the house. Col. Lear observed that the peak of the general appeared wet and that snow was sticking to his hair. But Washington refused to change his clothes and sat down to dinner.

Beginning of End

The next day, a companion of the general's, Col. Lear suggested that the general take something for his cold, but Washington answered: "No, you know, I never take anything for a cold, for it does no good."

On the following day at 3 o'clock, the morning Washington told Martha that he was very unwell. That he had the ague. He could scarcely speak and breathed with difficulty. Martha begged him to let her awaken the servants and fetch him a home remedy. But Washington sternly refused to let her get up for fear she too would catch a cold.

At daybreak a servant came and lighted the fire. Soon Col. Lear arrived and found the general voiceless. A loathsome mixture of molasses, vinegar and butter was offered to Washington.

but he could not swallow a drop. As he tried harder to get it down, he started to cough convulsively, and almost suffocated. Rawlins, the overseer of the farm, was sent for with Washington's request to bleed him.

The overseer had acquired his surgical acumen in the practice of veterinary medicine. He took a pint of blood from Washington but there was no relief. Dr. Craik arrived shortly after 9 o'clock. He applied a blister of Spanish flies (derived from dried and powdered blister beetles) to the throat, took some more blood, and prescribed a gargle of vinegar and sage tea. He also ordered vinegar and hot water for steam inhalation. At 11 o'clock the bleeding was repeated but the difficulty in swallowing and breathing did not improve. In the meantime Dr. Gustav Richard Brown, of Port Tobacco, and Dr. Elisha Cullen Dick, of Alexandria, had been summoned as consultants.

Rejects Surgery

Dr. Brown suggested more copious bleeding. The young American doctor, Dick, objected. He argued, "He needs all his strength—bleeding will diminish it." He was overruled by his two senior colleagues who were supported by the good soldier, Washington. A whole quart of blood was taken this time.

To add insult to injury, the laxative, calomel, and the emetic, tartar were administered, weakening the patient still further.

As a last resort Dr. Dick suggested the use of a new, revolutionary method, the only one available which could have saved the patient from slow suffocation caused by the obstruction of the larynx. "Tracheotomy—the surgical cutting of an opening into the windpipe.

The older colleagues refused to take a chance on their illustrious patient. Instead,

Youngsters May Profit
By Learning to Type
While in Grade School

A typewriter can be a great boon to learning and, contrary to what you might think, it can even improve the handwriting.

Paula was in third grade. She was an average student. Paula read quite well but her handwriting and her spelling were pretty awful. She was timid and shy and was overcome with embarrassment when she had to recite in class.

One weekend she had a composition to write. Paula hated compositions. She could think up things to say all right, but getting it on the paper was such a chore she just never bothered to write down all she had to say.

Paula was alone in the house for several hours Saturday morning. She sneaked in to her father's study, put a piece of paper in his typewriter and began her composition about "My Dog Pat."

Had had shown her something about how to use the machine and she managed quite well. She used the "hunt and peck" system of finding the letters.

It was fun. She wrote two whole pages. The finished product wouldn't have won any typing prizes but in Paula's eyes it looked wonderful—so much better than her laborious handwriting.

Proud Daughter

When mother came home Paula was just finishing. She was on top of the world. She had written that composition early and she knew it was the best one she had ever done. Also the paper was a masterpiece of neatness.

Mother read the composition. She was amazed and tremendously pleased and of course said so.

On Monday Paula took her composition to school. The teacher was delighted and asked the child if she would like to read it to the class. To the teacher's surprise Paula said "yes." Paula read it without embarrassment and with obvious pleasure. Later it was tacked up on the bulletin board.

Turning Point

This seemed a turning point for the child. Here was something she could do. She gained confidence in herself and was willing to try. Even the handwriting suddenly became more legible and the papers done in school were less messy.

Many other children profit from the use of a typewriter. It is so much easier to type than to struggle with a pen or pencil. Children enjoy typing, are freer to get on paper those racing ideas. The child's increased morale inspires him to work more effectively at other subjects.

Attendance
At Wedding
Might Help

BY EMILY POST

Dear Mrs. Post: I think it's wrong for me to go to a wedding while I'm in mourning for my husband. It is four months now and I still don't feel like going out with people. Besides which, I'm wearing all black. My family thinks I'm wrong not to go to my favorite niece's wedding. If I did give in to them I don't feel it's right to go in black and I certainly can't be expected to change for this one occasion, can I?

Answer: It is entirely a question of whether you can bear going or not. If you can, it is really strengthening your courage to make the effort. You can wear a bunch of violets or an orchid on your dress with, let us say, a temporary collar to match either one. This would relieve the blackness.

Crowded Table

Dear Mrs. Post: Last evening four couples were dining in a well-known restaurant. The table we were at was rather small but attractively set with a centerpiece of flowers. When the food was brought in, and the salad put down at the side of the plate, plus bread and butter plates, the table became very crowded and so I asked the waitress to remove the flowers. I was criticized by the others for doing this. Will you please tell me was I wrong?

Answer: If the table was uncomfortably crowded and you were the hostess you were right, but if you were dining "Dutch Treat" you should have asked the other, "Don't think we would be more comfortable if the flowers were removed?" before speaking to the waitress.

Contribution

Dear Mrs. Post: Is it correct for me to hand a girl friend money to put on the collection plate when she goes with me to my church?

Answer: She should put her own money on the collection plate. To offer her money thinking day, Christine Ziemann, of Troop 24, talked about World Association day and Troop 67 sang "Taps."

I worried aloud to John. "I wish you'd speak to him. I know he's just visiting one of his friends. But what if he isn't. Something could have happened."

"Something's going to happen," John said a little grimly. And when some 30 minutes later Tommy came wagging unconcernedly home, it did.

Then I wished I'd handled Tommy's punishment myself. For John was much too cross and I thought his punishment—an 8 o'clock bedtime for two weeks—too severe.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I want very much to keep this marriage together for the sake of our three children.

Dear B and H: You should not have left the third girl alone just because the fellows moved in. Shame on you! And P. S. While we're on the subject, if you allow yourselves to be "picked up" in the movies no boys will ever ask you for a real honest-to-godness date. Why should they?

Lenten Reading Featured
At Library This Week

Lenten reading is featured at the public library this week.

Heading the list of non-fiction books is "The Tales Christ Told" by April Oursler Armstrong, daughter of Fulton Oursler. The book is a retelling of 40 of Jesus' parables.

A lavishly illustrated and documentary work on the Holy Land as it is today is "Jesus Lived Here" by Paul Bruin. Most of the photographs were taken over a 4-year period by Philip Giegiel. They present a clear picture of a country where basic customs have changed little through the years.

Dead Sea Scrolls
Those interested in archaeology will find the "People of the Dead Sea Scrolls" a fascinating book. John Allegro's work is a pictorial record of the story behind the Dead Sea scrolls. The book pictures the caves and the dwellings, surrounded by bleak desert settings, where the people of the scrolls lived.

Several other religious books highlight the week's selection.

Charles F. Potter's "The Great Religious Leaders" is a study of the men who created the faiths which have endured for centuries. It includes religions of every land and the men behind the ideas.

Francois Amiot examines the development and significance of the mass in the light of history in his "History of the Mass." Tudor Edwards "Worlds Apart" is the story of the great living monasteries of Europe and of the author's travels to research the monastic movement.

Lenten Trend
The lenten trend also carries into the fiction department. In Cothburn O'Neal's "Hagar" the life of Sarah's handmaiden, Hagar, and her son, Ishmael, is recreated.

Among other fiction works is "The Angry Scar" a novel by Hodding Carter about the reconstruction.

"The Secret Ways" by Alister MacLean, author of "H.M. Ulysses" and the "Guns of Natarone", is an espionage novel set in Budapest.

1,543 Animals Handled
By Humane Society
In 10-Month Period
A total of 1,543 animals were handled by the Outagamie County Humane society from April 15 to Feb. 15, according to a 10-month report issued by Mrs. Jesse Erlanson, shelter manager.

Her statistics show 1,206 dogs were handled at the shelter, of which 307 were returned to owners. A total of 308 cats were returned to owners or placed in new homes and 9 guinea pigs, 10 chickens, 9 rabbits and 1 goat were placed in new homes.

Workers to Visit Homes in Afternoon In Twin City Area

Neenah — Nearly 500 volunteer workers will make a door-to-door canvass of the Twin Cities and surrounding rural area Sunday afternoon to secure donations for the Heart Fund drive.

The same procedure is being followed in 10,000 other communities in the county in observance of Washington's birthday as Heart Sunday. This will climax a month-long drive.

The volunteer workers will make their solicitations between noon and 5 p. m. and will report to the YWCA with their donations.

Each of the volunteer workers will visit several homes in her immediate neighborhood, carrying a supply of contribution envelopes. The householder may seal his donation in the envelope and does not have to divulge the amount of his gift, according to Walter Chrapla, drive chairman.

Board to Check Applicants for Summer Jobs

Applications Open Until March 24 For Menasha Posts

Menasha — Preliminary examination of applications for jobs in the summer recreation program and pool attendants will begin Tuesday, according to Robert Vanevenhoven, recreation director.

The executive board of the recreation board will meet at 4:30 p. m. Tuesday to begin the work. The committee includes Mrs. George Pratt, Clifford Heiss, Edward Wasikiewicz and Vanevenhoven.

Vanevenhoven announced that the board will continue to accept applications for the summer posts through March 24. "This will give those attending colleges a chance to apply when they come home for spring vacations," Vanevenhoven said.

Age Requirements

The director explained that the age requirements for pool attendants are 17 years for boys and 18 years for girls. These workers also must have passed senior Red Cross life saving requirements. For recreation work the applicants must be 16 years old by April 15 of this year.

Vanevenhoven said that after applications are received the records of those applying will be checked at the schools. Personal interviews are conducted by the department.

It is expected that between 65 and 70 workers will be hired for summer work at the pool and in the recreation program.

Vanevenhoven said a senior Red Cross life saving course will open March 23 and run through March 27 to give applicants an opportunity to get the training during the Easter vacation.

Tugboat Hero of Crash Troubled By Death Memory

Rockland, Mass. — The tugboat skipper who cut loose two barges and helped rescue eight persons when an American Airlines plane plunged into the East river at New York two weeks ago can't forget the horror.

"I should have saved more. I should have saved more," Carl Samuel R. Nickerson moans in his sickbed in his home here.

The 57-year-old seafarer, worn out by the rescue efforts and the 30 sleepless hours that followed while investigators fired questions, was discharged a few days ago from Goodard hospital in a slough of blood.

His wife says he can't shut out the memory of the passengers in sea, swept away by the darkness.

"He keeps going over the accident. It won't let him rest."

Honored for 1,923,338 Man Hours of operation without a lost time accident was the Kimberly-Clark Corporation Research and Development department which was awarded a national safety council honor plaque. The time is the equivalent of one man working a thousand years. Left to right are Kurt Hinsch, retiring safety steering committee chairman, Frieda O'Rourke, committee member; R. W. Wood, staff safety supervisor, W. H. Swanson, vice president; and H. B. Kellogg, new committee chairman.

Retiring members presented with a token appreciation gift by George Rushton, personnel manager for research and development, are Kenneth Janssen, Gerald Becker, Walter Bubltz, and Kjell Rosenlund.

W. H. Swanson, vice president in charge of research and development accepted the plaque on behalf of the employees from R. W. Wood, corporation safety supervisor who represented the national council.

Wood mentioned the 1957 accident figures of the National Safety council showed 100,000 deaths of which 39,000 were on highways, 14,000 in industry, 28,000 in the homes and 17,500 in public parks and areas. Over 9 million persons were injured and the total accident bill, "paid by you and me was well over $11 billion."

Robert Wrede, personnel assistant, talked about the need for control of off-duty accidents. Research and development employees in the last six months had six lost-time off-duty accidents with 68 days of work lost because of those accidents.

Bela Kovacs Endorses Hungarian Red Regime

Budapest, Hungary — Bela Kovacs, once powerful leader of the strong smallholders party, Friday endorsed Hungary's communist government.

Breaking a 2-year silence, he swung his support to the communists who arrested him in 1947 after his party had beaten the communists in a parliamentary election. He then spent a number of years in Soviet prisons.

"We are on the right road and we must not stray from it," said a Kovacs' statement in the newspaper Magyar Nemzet. It said that Kovacs, now 51, in his early political days envisaged "economic and social life only in capitalist forms" but in recent years of misfortune "I carefully studied the difference between capitalism and socialism."

Sheriff's Deputy Speaks On Delinquency for Club

Menasha — A policeman's point of view of juvenile delinquency was related to economics club members Friday afternoon by Richard Guenther, Winnebago county sheriff's deputy.

Guenther pointed out delinquency often stems from a lack of respect for parents. He blamed parents partially for not being firm enough with their children. "If you can't say no, without meaning no, there is no discipline and soon there will be no respect."

"We can only deal with delinquents in the way the law allows us to," he said, explaining the biggest share of responsibility must belong to the people of an area. They must gain the respect of children, if they have lost that respect, and should teach young people a regard for the law, he emphasized.

Vikes Defeat Cornell '5'

Hit 50 Per Cent From Floor In 83-74 Triumph; Victory Snaps 7-Game Losing Streak

BY JOHN L. PAUSTIAN
Post-Crescent Sports Editor

Lawrence college's hard-court hunters, who have come back empty-handed with distressing regularity in the last four seasons, Friday night bagged a rare delicacy for an unscheduled victory feast.

The Vikings felled a powerful Ram (genus Cornell) with a display of marksmanship that would have gladdened the heart of Buffalo Bill or Annie Oakley or even Davey Crockett.

The approximately 600 fans who watched the Vikes end a 7-game famine, 83-74, sat in

'Birdie' Tucks Braves Mound Staff in Fold

While Pitching Set, Aaron, Nine Others Still Unsigned

By The Associated Press

Birdie Tebbetts was a catcher who could handle the best of pitchers. He was a manager who never had many good pitchers to handle. Now he's executive vice president of the Milwaukee Braves, the team with potentially the best pitching staff in the major leagues.

Tebbetts Friday delivered the signed contracts of Bob Buhl and Joey Jay to Braves' skipper Fred Haney, and the defending National League champions were ready to begin battery workouts at Bradenton, Fla., today with their big five tucks in the fold.

Aaron Holds Out

But while Milwaukee's pitching seemed set, its big bat—Hank Aaron—was among nine players unsigned on the 40-man roster.

The Braves also delivered an ultimatum to Gene Conley, their right-hander. Report today or face suspension was the word from Haney. Conley recently said he intends to skip spring training to finish the basketball season with the Boston Celtics of the NBA.

The pitchers and catchers reported to the Detroit Tigers' camp at Lakeland, Fla., Friday and at St. Peterburg where the St. Louis Cardinals opened battery workouts. But the Tigers' Frank Lary and the Cards' Vinegar Bend Mizell failed to sign and were branded holdouts.

Ford, Mantle Balk

The Yankees' standout lefty Whitey Ford, continued to balk as did slugger Mickey Mantle, but outfielder Norm Siebern picked up a $4,000 raise to $12,000 Friday for his .300 batting average. Six Yankees are unsigned.

Pitcher Ike Delock agreed to terms with the Boston Red Sox. Pitcher Frank Sullivan and catcher Sammy White are the only unsigned batters.

The Chicago White Sox's futility has been hanged in effigy. The Warriors started pitcher Barry Latman when Xavier on its downfall when shortstop Luis Aparicio they bounced it from the ungrateful to terms.

Junior varsity players filled in the remaining spots—and did it surprisingly well. The visitors led, 52-45, going into the final period. But, Reschke sparked a 26-point quarter with four straight baskets that sent the Foxes ahead to stay. Darrell Mindel got the assist on each of the goals.

Sheboygan — Appleton High's basketball Terrors today laid plans for Green Bay East's invasion tonight, again ahead AHS was just having been freshly reminded that a balanced offense will usually beat a 1-man attack.

Looking like anything Nussbaum but a team which had lost six of its last seven Fox River Valley conference starts. Sheboygan North's Golden Raiders

Appleton enjoyed a 7-point lead at one time (10-3). The hosts spurred for six straight markers at the start of the second half and were never again ahead. AHS was just five points down (45-40) going into the final period but the Northmen poured in the first nine tallies of the quarter to wrap up the verdict.

For the twelfth straight game John Nussbaum either owned or shared the Appleton scoring lead, this time with 25 points. Hitting eight of 17 floor shots and nine of 10 free throw attempts, the 5-8 junior had the game's best point total.

Only one other visitor, Bob Ferrel, managed to get into double figures and he totaled just 11 points. In five of Appleton's last seven contests no Terror but Nussbaum could exceed this figure.

Big Dropoff

After Ferrel, the dropoff went to Paul Vanderheyden's six tallies.

The Northmen, on the other hand, had four players in double figures. Randy Prange, dead on 20-foot jump shots from the corner and mid-court area, buzzed through 13 points. North's scoring leader.

They were in front 16-11 at the end of the first period and, after holding leads of eight points a couple of times in the second quarter, were on top 32-28 at halftime advantage.

Clintonville caught up at 36-all, went ahead 38-37 and after being tied at 40, took a 42-41 lead at the close of three frames.

Kimberly — Overcoming an almost insurmountable lead, Neenah forced Kimberly into a stall to preserve its win streak and clinch the Mid-Eastern conference solo basketball championship with a 74-66 victory here Friday night.

The Papermakers led by 13 points with six minutes left in the game but the Rockets took off on a scoring spree that narrowed the gap to 69-56 with 2:25 left. Kimberly went into a stall and picked up five free throws in the closing minutes as the Rockets fought to get possession of the ball.

Tom Black, West Salem, scored 51 in his team's 100-65 victory over Melrose and Bruce Koser had the same total for Prairie Du Chien as his team beat Fennimore, 114-49.

Close Contest

The miss was one of 11 in 18 tries. And several of the losers missed charity tosses during the first half and one-half minutes remaining in the game.

The game was nip and tuck throughout with neither team able to build up a lead. Shawano led throughout most of the game but in the first three minutes of the final period Kaukauna managed to move to a 5-point lead, the widest margin for either team in the game.

Despite the closeness of the contest, most of the play came in the final few minutes. Shawano fought back in the last period to overcome the 5-point deficit and gain the lead 40-39 with two and one-half minutes remaining in the game.

Score By Quarters

After calling a time out, the Ghosts worked a stall for two minutes for a fine pass shot at the basket. A missed pass enabled Shawano to gain possession and the Indians started a stall. After a stall and missed free throw, Kaukauna regained possession, setting the stall for the final second shot by Vanevenhoven.

Kaukauna jumped off to an early lead as the Indians went two minutes before cracking.

Diplomat Interferes in U. S. Domestic Politics

Asks Menshikov Recall for Breaking International Rules

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington — Mikhail Menshikov, the Soviet ambassador to the United States, has violated diplomatic rules by a bold intervention in American politics.

Lawrence

In this instance Senator James W. Fulbright, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, should be among the first to demand that Menshikov be expelled from this country.

For the Soviet envoy has violated the confidence of the Arkansas senator by arranging for the publication by his son, Stanislaw Menshikov, in a recent issue of "New Times" a report of alleged conversations with Fulbright dealing with American politics.

In the article the younger Menshikov says he was told by Sen. Fulbright that if the Democrats win in 1960, the Soviets will have a better chance to get their way in world affairs.

No Such Intimation

No such intimation probably was given by the Arkansas senator. The very fact that Menshikov arranged for the government-controlled "New Times," printed by the Soviet government in eight languages besides Russian and distributed widely throughout the world to publish any article purporting to give conversations with a United States senator is a sign that he either doesn't know the rules of diplomatic relations or chooses to disregard them.

The Menshikov article says: "To what extent is the victory of the Democratic party at the elections likely to affect the foreign policy of the Republican government?" Will the Democratic opposition be able and willing to compel the state department to relinquish its policy?

"I had an interview in Washington with James Fulbright Democratic senator from Arkansas. The senator is a calm, sober minded man of 53, with a slow, deliberate manner, thin hair, greying at the temples, light blue eyes and the old professional trick of peering over his glasses as he listens to you, received me in his office in the new senate building."

The article then quotes with approval from speeches Fulbright made during the summer of 1958 which Menshikov cites as criticizing the American government for its far eastern and middle eastern policies and as charging that the state department was displaying a dangerous apathy in allowing itself to be run by a bureaucracy so fearful of change that it clings desperately to the ancient pillars of policy even as they rot away under the pressure of irresistible developments.

The article went on to predict that Fulbright would become chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee. The Menshikov article then continues:

"Talk in November. My talk with him took place in late November. The senator had just returned from a trip to Asia and was full of energy and new impressions. He expressed the opinion that war between the Soviet Union and the United States was senseless under all circumstances and that relations between our two countries must be improved at all costs. The whole point was how to do it."

In the senator's opinion one splendid way to promote mutual understanding is through personal contacts and cultural ties. He said that the country was heading for a Republican defeat in the 1960 elections and a change in the government. The state department would be obliged to some extent to reckon with the new trends in the country and in congress.

But he added the president and the members of his cabinet cannot be compelled to do anything they did not want to do, and hence he Fulbright did not believe there would be any serious change in U. S. foreign policy in the next two years.

He did, however, believe that if the Democratic party were to be sufficiently active in this period it could prepare the ground for such changes by the time the new elections came around.

Within the last few days Premier Khrushchev made a speech in which he praised Senator Mike Mansfield Democrat of Montana, an other member of the foreign relations committee for suggesting that the problem of

Green Bay Sixth Biggest Lake Port

12,000 Drop in Tonnage; Goods Worth $13 Million

Despite a drop of 12,000 tons in 1958 overseas tonnage Green Bay ranked sixth among 14 United States and Canadian Great Lakes ports in overseas commerce last year.

A report of the Great Lakes commission received by the Brown county harbor commission reported a record total of 1,061,097 tons of overseas commerce in 1958 at the 14 ports.

The harbor commission had earlier reported Green Bay had 39,364 tons of overseas commerce last year, made up of 13,145 tons of imports and 26,219 tons of exports.

In 1957, Green Bay ranked fifth among the 14 ports with 51,076 tons.

Canadian wood pulp imports at Green Bay last year boosted the total foreign tonnage to 131,131 tons, compared to a total foreign tonnage in 1957 of 114,437.

Ports which ranked ahead of Green Bay in 1958 were Chicago - Indiana harbor 226,642 tons; Toronto 287,768 tons; Detroit 23,159 tons; Cleveland 79,121 tons and Milwaukee, 66,571 tons. Green Bay ranked ahead of Hamilton Ont., 34,916 tons; Toledo 32,977 tons and Duluth-Superior, 25,312 tons.

The harbor commission said a value of more than $13 million was placed on 1958 Green Bay overseas and Canadian commerce by H. M. Lincoln street collector of customs

Road Toll Ahead Of Last Year For January

Wisconsin traffic accidents claimed 58 lives in January this year, compared to 49 in the same month last year, the motor vehicle department reported.

Outagamie county had its first 1959 traffic death Jan. 5 about five weeks sooner than last year.

January death totals for the surrounding counties totaled two in Brown, none last year, none either year in Calumet, three in Shawano, none last year, three in Waupaca, two last year, and one in Winneago, two last year.

Despite the 18 per cent increase in road deaths, the mileage death rate actually dropped from 5.02 fatalities per 100 million miles of travel in January a year ago to 4.95 in January this year.

What Volunteer Gray Ladies Do

There are 63 volunteer Gray Ladies, and Gray Men, working for Outagamie County Red Cross. They are giving more than 4000 hours of service from the town time. They work and visit with patients at Winnebago State Hospital, Outagamie County Hospital and at River View Sanatorium.

They read to patients, help write letters, comb and fix hair, patients' hair, give make-up, bandage, and manicures (Gray Men do appropriate, similar things for men patients). They work with patients, play games, help with the house, and more. They help the music therapist and assist and join with patients at dances.

This year there are also 35 trained volunteers from the Lawrence College student body. Seeing how people give of their free time to help others, you can work in Red Cross. They are volunteers, and members of Red Cross.

They ask for nothing but the satisfaction of each face they help.

All you are asked to do is to become a member of Red Cross. This year, enter your name for membership in Red Cross. Then you will be helping too by making the work of the Gray volunteers and other Red Cross services possible.

These factual messages are prepared to help you understand better all of the local volunteer services of the Outagamie County Chapter of Red Cross.
